Down by the Border

Class Warfare [2]

Swine flu [3] is still a deadly [4] disease, although as a pandemic [5] it's not as virulent as the avian flu. Still, people are trying to sanitize their personal universes [6] in response ...

Hantavirus [7], which is harder to acquire, isn't getting easier to survive.

The virtual fence [8] along the border [9] isn't going away anytime soon, regardless of its inimical impact on towns, commerce, and the environment -- just like FEMA [10]. How come the teabaggers [11] aren't protesting this wasteful government enterprise, or the \$7 billion dollar genuine fence, with its building and maintenance costs [12], the DHS hasn't scrapped already despite the proof that it won't work and the myriad groups protesting its construction [13], from California to the Gulf Coast? Oh, I forgot -- this boondoggle [14] helps keep out brown people.... which means, of course, that it's one of those few things the government gets right, according to the Loud Obbs crowd. Unlike clean water [15] and good schools [16], which like mines and well-drilling [17] for gas and oil [18], all ought to be as profit-driven as healthcare. Once they hear about Bill Richardson's effort to improve economic conditions for Native American tribes, they'll be wanting the fence to enclose his state, too [19]. Not that my neighbors to the west would be interested, but sometimes I wish I could [14] swap governors [20] with 'em, not to mention Senators [21].

Jobs are dropping [22] like flies across the Southwest, too, not just in Texas [23] and New Mexico. Take a hard look at what's happening [24] in California [25], Nevada, and Arizona.

What's wanted isn't more Democrats -- it's better ones. One Bingaman is worth a half-dozen Baucuses, and it's starting to look like the Junior Senator from New Mexico is no slouch of a voice for common sense. Meanwhile, here in Texas, we're stuck with John Boxturtle and Kay Bailey Hutchison.
