

In the garden: Spot the cat!

Submitted by lambert on Sun, 08/31/2014 - 3:34pm

In case you can't....

Here's the cat.

Quite a bad cat, too. It made good use of cover, sneaking along my extremely weedy woodchuck fence bordering the driveway; see the tall green stuff at left. In fact, it was so sneaky I thought maybe it had moved out from behind the fence without my spotting it. I was standing up on a chair, hoping to get a good shot, so I got down and walked slowly toward the fence... When suddenly it appeared behind the Black-Eyed Susans, and we locked gazes for in instant, and I got the shot. From far away, as you see; no zoom on the iPad! Then it was off under a car, and away.

So I see why birds are so scared of cats and, hence, like to perch on my tomato poles and U-hoops in the open air, with no mess around. Cats are sneaky! Even black-and-white cats that should be easy to spot against all the color!

Attachment	Size
 cat_spotting.JPG <sup>[1]</sup>	146.61 KB
 cat_spotting_200.jpg <sup>[2]</sup>	19.98 KB

No votes yet

Updated:

---

Source URL (modified on 08/31/2014 - 3:36pm): http://correntewire.com/in\_the\_garden\_spot\_the\_cat

Links

[1] http://correntewire.com/files/cat\_spotting.JPG

[2] http://correntewire.com/files/cat\_spotting\_200.jpg